Featuring...

Kayla Belser (she/they) - is a writer and editor from Cincinnati, OH. She received her BA in English with a minor in Social Justice Studies from Northern Kentucky University. She is currently obtaining her MFA in Fiction from Miami University. In her work, she pairs words with the many layers of Black existence, queer identity, the phenomena of grief (birthed from death and all the other devastating things), and forgiveness. Her favorite book is The Namesake by Jhumpa Lahiri. In her free time she enjoys finding art and decor for her new home, spending time with her family and friends, a good laugh, a good cry, exploring new cities and finding more to love about her own.

Ross Kohler- is a first year MFA poet. He has no money, but someday he hopes to have a poetry book and no money.

Kendra Stiers (she/they) - is a fiction and nonfiction writer from Indianapolis. They are currently working on an MFA in Creative Writing as well as a certificate in Women's, Gender, and Sexuality Studies at Miami University. Her writing interests include queer and feminist issues, religion, the braided essay, and a thousand other things that she is constantly working to juggle and connect in her prose. They have most recently been published in Happy Captive Magazine. When she isn't writing, you can usually find her hiking, crocheting, or hanging out with her cat.
